Dear [Whom it may concern],

My name is Zachary Linzmeyer and I am applying for the [Junior Web Developer position]. I would describe myself as a lifelong learner, always eager to learn new things and skills. I am capable of working with anyone and can solve any problem thrown at me. Please see attached my resume.

I too share a passion for creating beautiful web designs. After completing my studies in Engineering at the University of Saskatchewan, I discovered my passion for web development. I wanted to learn more about web development and I took an online course, CareerFoundry, to learn how to code. You may view projects that I have completed at https://zaclinz.github.io/portfolio-website/work.html.

I also have plenty of experience helping customers and working alongside clients and ensuring they get what they want. At the University of Saskatchewan, I took a class in which we learned how to work with and for a client to ensure that we delivered on a professional project that met all of the client's needs. I appreciate you taking the time to read my application.

I am looking forward to hearing back from you and potentially setting up an interview in the near future.

Sincerely,

Zachary Linzmeyer
